

Migraine is frequently misunderstood to be “just a headache.” In fact, migraine is a neurological disease that can be debilitating. More Americans suffer from migraine than from asthma and diabetes combined, yet migraine research is severely underfunded. Migraine is a major disease that receives about 1/20 th of the research dollars that should be given to it based upon its impact.

Migraine patients desperately need new research to discover new treatments, and more headache researchers and clinical specialists need to be trained. Miles for Migraine brings patients and caregivers together to foster awareness of this disease, and we need your help to support our education days, community groups and walk/run series.

Miles for Migraine began in 2008 to address the stigma of migraine and the research funding shortfall. It attracts serious runners and weekend racers, those affected from migraine, and friends and family who want to show their support.

Please join us at an event, or get your name in front of our community members. Every dollar you contribute stays in the city you are located. Since our programs are sponsored nationally, your funds go towards 100% of our research needs. Your in-kind donation of tangible goods or services (such as gift cards), can also be recognized as payment toward an “Advertising” or “Business Card” sponsorship.
